To the Senate and Assembly of the Legislature of California:

I am pleased to present this report on the status of local housing elements pursuant to the requirements of Chapter 1441, Statutes of 1990. This report describes the compliance status of each local government in California and an overview of statewide compliance with housing element law.

The report highlights a steady increase in housing element compliance. The high level of compliance reflects the serious and continuing efforts of State and local governments to effectively address California's housing needs. HCD is committed to continuing this partnership.

I am confident you will find this report useful in evaluating the status of local housing elements. We continue to be committed to working with all interested parties to increase the effectiveness of State housing element law as a tool for meeting housing needs and promoting economic growth and vitality.

Sincerely,

Julie Bornstein

INTRODUCTION

State housing element law recognizes the vital role local governments play in the supply and affordability of housing in California. As a result, housing policy in the State rests largely upon the effective implementation of the housing element of local general plans. Housing element law, enacted in 1969, directs local governments to use their land use and zoning powers to make adequate provision for the housing needs of all economic segments of the community.

This report, required by Health & Safety Code Section 50459(c), describes the status of local compliance with State housing element law and highlights the significant progress achieved in increasing statewide compliance rates.

HOUSING ELEMENT STATUS

In 2000, 528 cities and counties in California were required to have an adopted housing element as part of their local general plan. Four new cities, Elk Grove (Sacramento County), Laguna Woods and Rancho Santa Margarita (Orange County) and Oakley (Contra Costa County) have incorporated since January 1, 1999. The general plans for these new cities are due to be adopted between September 24, 2001 and July 1, 2003, pursuant to Section 65360 of the Government Code.

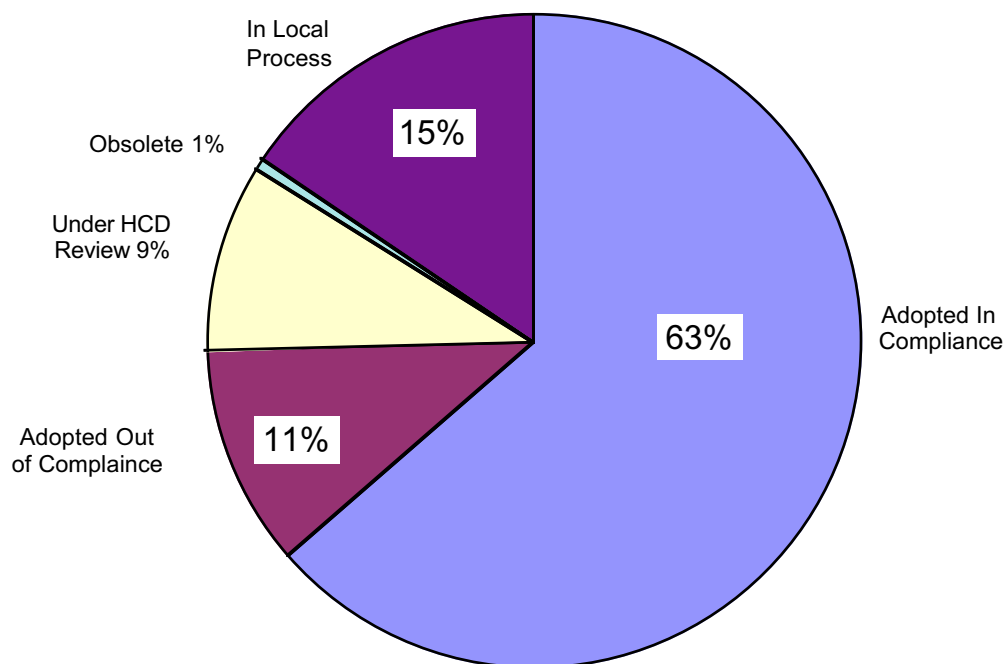

Since 1990, the number of jurisdictions making a commitment to improving housing opportunities by bringing their housing elements into compliance with State law has steadily increased. As of December 31, 2000, 330 jurisdictions (63%) had adopted housing elements in compliance. In 2000, 56 jurisdictions (11%) have adopted housing elements HCD found did not comply with State law. Eighty jurisdictions (15%) had a draft in process at the local level, while 48 jurisdictions (9%) had housing elements under review at HCD at the end of December 2000. Four jurisdictions had not submitted a housing element pursuant to the most recent statutory deadline, and therefore had a housing element that was obsolete.

Governor Davis recently proposed, and the Legislature approved, the largest State general fund budget for housing in California history. The wide-reaching and innovative budget proposal provides funding for existing successful housing and community development efforts and creates new programs designed to address California's critical housing problems.

HCD operates a wide variety of community development funding programs designed to improve housing conditions and opportunities, revitalize and strengthen communities, and expand economic prosperity. HCD has long understood the linkage between an adequate supply of safe and affordable housing and a strong vibrant economy. As a result, HCD funding programs facilitate community and economic development, housing development, preservation and improvement, and local capacity buildings.

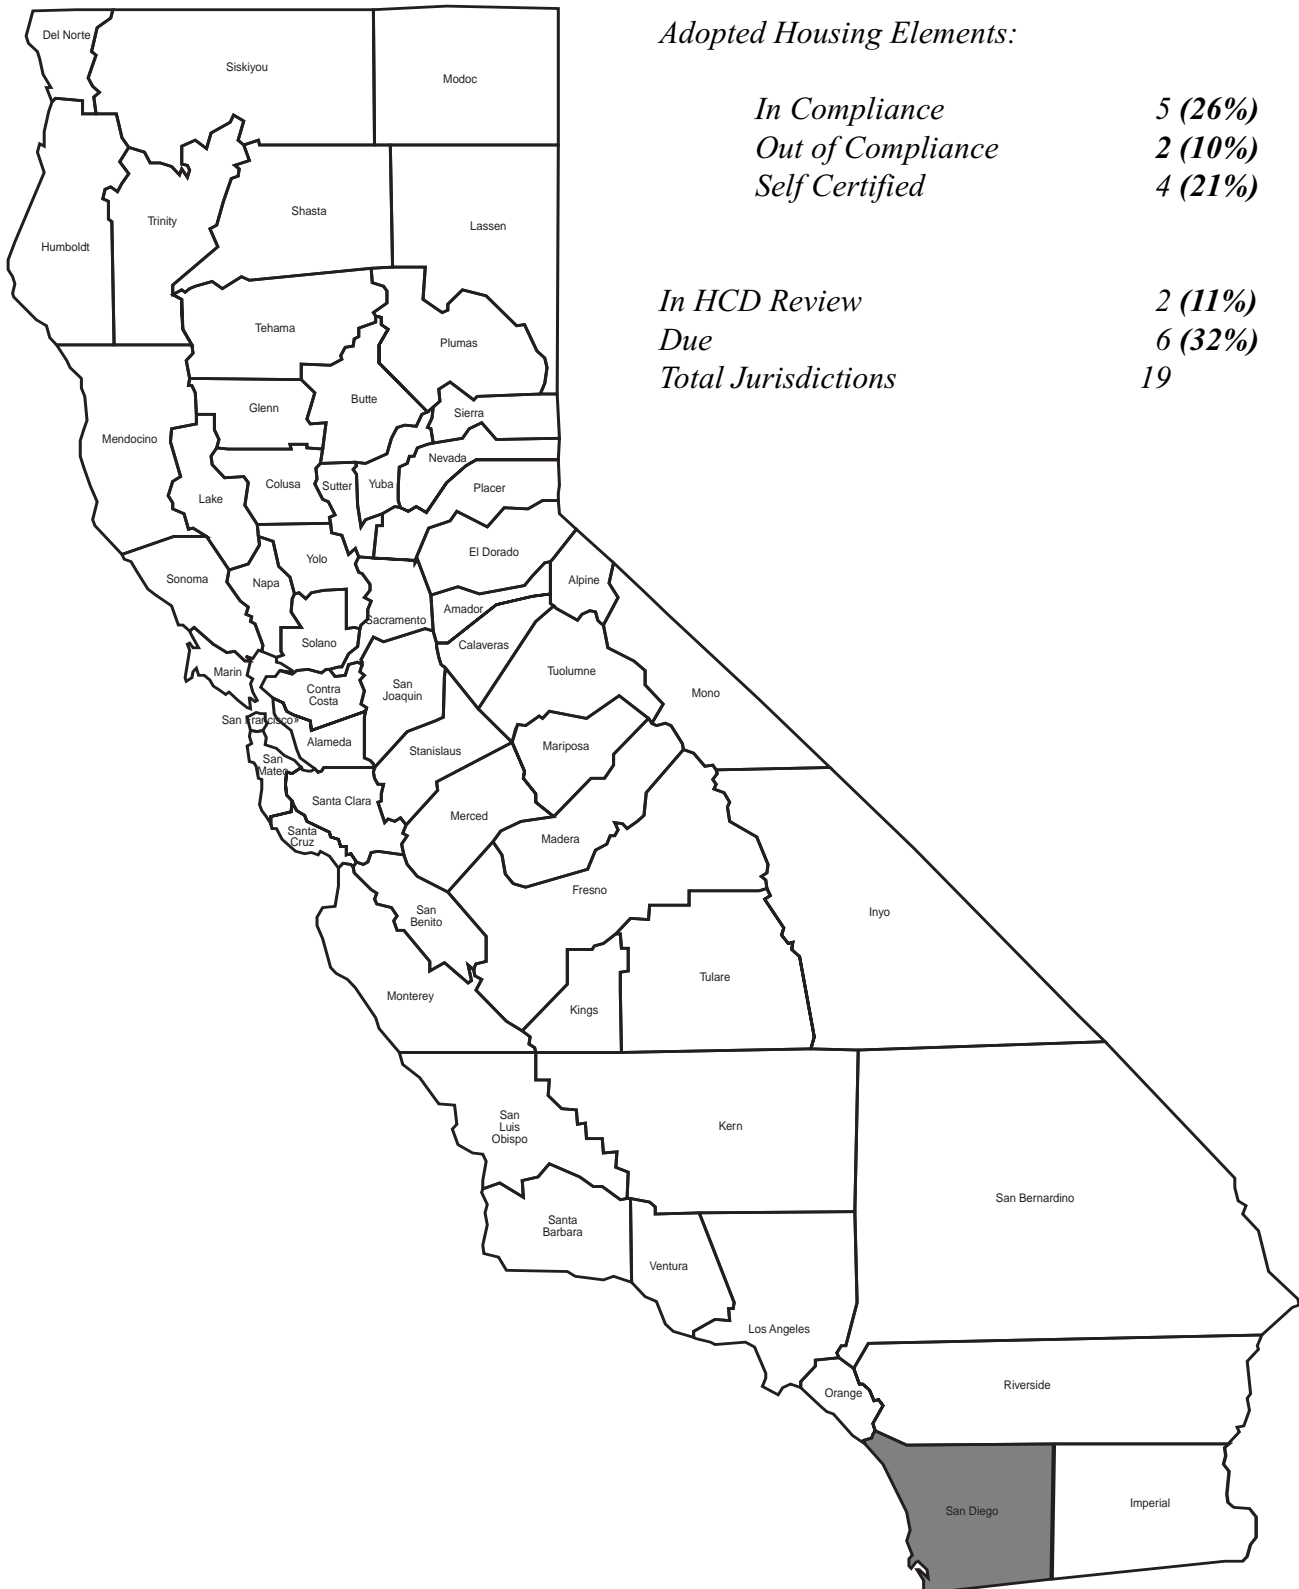

The most ambitious new funding program, The Jobs-Housing Balance Improvement Program provides incentives to local governments to increase housing supply in their communities and adopt a housing element in compliance with State law. This innovative program will reward local government efforts to promote the supply and affordability of housing and whose efforts result in an increased issuance of building permits. The program further rewards local governments for permitting housing which traditionally is the most difficult to provide (i.e., multifamily, affordable, and infill). Information about this and HCD's other funding programs is available on the Department's website at www.hcd.ca.gov.

COMPLIANCE STATUS KEY

In addition, local redevelopment agencies have stepped up their housing production and rehabilitation programs in an effort to meet some local housing needs. Housing element compliance has been a significant tool in promoting the development of affordable housing by providing guidance to developers and opportunities for local governments to provide affordable housing.

HCD will continue to seek out new opportunities and resources to assist local governments in preparing and implementing their housing elements. We welcome all suggestions and ideas about potential opportunities and resources that could be brought to bear and commit to working tirelessly to ensure all Californians have access to decent, safe and affordable housing.

This report is available on the Department's web site at www.hcd.ca.gov/hpd/hrc/plan/he . Hard copies will be available on request.

The following listing provides specific compliance information for each local government as of December 31, 1999. The Compliance Status column indicates the official status of the housing element. A compliance status of:

IN - the local government has adopted an element that HCD found in compliance with State housing element law.

OUT - either the local government has adopted an element that HCD found did not comply with State housing element law, or the local government has not yet adopted their housing element pursuant to the statutory schedule.

IN REVIEW - the element is currently under review by HCD.

DUE - for SANDAG jurisdictions only, an element not received as of December 31, 1999, the statutory deadline and the end of this reporting period.

SC - for SANDAG jurisdictions only, the housing element has been self-certified pursuant to a pilot program authorized by Section 65585.1 of the Government Code.

We make every effort to ensure that the following information is complete and up-to-date. For internal use, we update the report monthly. If you need more current information or have questions about any listing, please call Rebecca Hoepcke at (916) 323-7271.
